

Abstract

In the light of new findings on the development and diffusion of the letters of St Catherine of Siena, the contribution reconstructs the textual history and reception of the Aldine edition of the Epistole devotissime (Venice, 1500), which went on to become the standard edition of the work until at least the eighteenth century.